As a senior faculty member and Director of the Center for Teaching and Learning I believe that Jefferson College’s Library is the foundation of our students’ success and faculty support.

I depend on the Library faculty and staff to help my students find and use research in all my classes. I teach hundreds of students a year and can’t imagine doing it without the Library.

I personally use the Library to stay updated on the topics I teach. I depend on the library to help educate our faculty on current and relevant issues. I encourage all my students to use the library in addition to their text books. The library is a convenient place for students to study or take tests before they must resume their daily responsibilities of work and or family.

The Library is the heart of education. Education is the key to options for a brighter future for everyone in our community. I strongly believe in the importance of quality research and a Library with quality faculty and staff to help patrons find what they need. Our library is imperative to a quality education accessible to everyone.
